THE STORY

Anna Glavari, the Merry Widow, is expected at a ball in progress at the Pontevedrian Embassy in Paris. She has inherited twenty millions from her late husband, a Pontevedrian banker, and it is essential to keep this money in the country. Count Danilo is therefore summoned from Maxim's (where he spends his time drinking and dancing) in order to captivate and eventually marry her.

In the meantime Valencienne, the Ambassador's wife, is engaged in a flirtation with Count Camille.

Anna arrives and is an immediate success with all the men. During the ball Danilo enters and Anna recognises him as the young lieutenant whose parents had parted them before she married her rich banker. Their old love revives, but Danilo will not court her because of her fortune and she vows she will not marry him unless he says "I love you". Anna saves Valencienne from exposure by her husband by changing places with her and then announces she has decided to marry Camille. The Baron is filled with consternation at the threat of his country losing the money and Danilo is furious at being supplanted and returns to Maxim's.

Anna gives a party in her garden which is decorated to resemble Maxim's and Njegus tricks Danilo into being led there by the Grisettes. Danilo persuades Anna to give up Camille and she tells him of the plot to save Valencienne, but the Baron has discovered the true story and vows he will divorce his wife and marry Anna himself. When he proposes, however, she tells him she automatically loses her fortune upon marriage. When Danilo hears this he is overjoyed and tells her he loves her. All ends happily when she explains that her fortune will become the property of her new husband, thus remaining in Pontevedro.
