"IT'S ALL
STRAWBERRIES

Here at Wilkin & Sons we don't very often take on new staff. Our employees stay for lifetimes, even generations.

But very occasionally we do employ someone new.

It's a salutary experience to a company who might be thought of as a little 'set' in their ways to understand things might be done differently.

In 1985 we employed a new factory manager. He took a jar of our Little Scarlet Strawberry conserve home to his 6 year old daughter, Charlotte, who'd been brought up on-the jam made by her father's previous firm. She was blunt in her reaction.

To a company who believes the definition of jam is preserved fruit it came as an eye-opener to receive the criticism: "But it's all strawberries.

Where's the jam?"
